

I left MCS in 2010 with 3 x A*s (History, English Literature, Philosophy & Ethics) and went to Cardiff University to study BA Modern History & Politics and later MSc (Econ) International Relations.

After university, I was looking to work in the international politics/government sector and was advised to prioritise getting business/consulting experience before taking that career route. This led to me being selected for a consulting graduate scheme in London where I would gain a lot of experience of working with several UK Government Departments on initiatives such as international trade, business growth, innovation and access to investment for UK start-ups.

I now work in the technology innovation space, which involves working with technology start-ups and large corporations to launch new ventures.

Mohanvir Singh Saran

